

Customer Satisfaction and Loyalty Analytics

Objective

To create an analytical report that identifies the key factors influencing customer satisfaction and loyalty across different regions, customer demographics, and support experiences.

Data Description

The dataset has the following features:

- Customer_ID = Unique customer identifier
- Group = Customer classification: A, B, or C • Group A: High-frequency shoppers • Group B: Moderate frequency • Group C: New or low-frequency
- Satisfaction_Score = Customer's rating of their experience (1 = very poor, 10 = excellent)
- Age and Gender = Demographic attributes
- Location = City and State (e.g., Austin.TX), with Latitude and Longitude for geographic mapping
- Purchase_History = Indicates if the customer has made purchases (Yes/No)
- Support_Contacted = Whether the customer interacted with support
- Loyalty_Level = OmniRetail's internal rating: Low / Medium / High loyalty
- Satisfaction_Factor = The main reason influencing the satisfaction score (e.g., Price, Product Variety, Packaging)

Key Highlights

- Total Customers = 120
- Avg. Satisfaction Score = 5.35 (Out of 10)
- % of Satisfied Customers = 68.3%
- Low Satisfaction Score Count = 50
- High Satisfaction Score Count = 27
- Support Contact Rate = 46.7%
- Avg. Age = 44

Insights

Demographics-Based Insights

1. Gender and Age Distribution:

- Females aged 36-45(16 customers) and 46-55 (27 customers) forms the largest segment, especially in group B.
- There's a slight peak in males aged 36-45 i.e., 16 customers.
- Male customers report slightly higher satisfaction on average i.e., 5.54.

2. Groups and Age Distribution:

- Group A has lower number of customers across all age group, especially in the age group of 18-25.
- Group B has large number of customers in age groups of 36-45 and 46-55.

Loyalty vs Satisfaction Analysis

1. Satisfaction by Gender and Loyalty:

- Males with high loyalty shows higher satisfaction (56%) than females (44%).
- Females dominate medium loyalty (53%) than males (47%), indicating potential to nurture to higher loyalty.

2. Satisfaction by Age Groups and Loyalty:

- Young customers aged 18-25 show highest satisfaction where the loyalty is high (67%) but decrease suddenly when loyalty is low.
- Customers aged 26-36 has higher low loyalty percentage.

Satisfaction by Factor and Loyalty

- Product Quality (7.5), Packaging (7.0), Product Variety (6.1) and Customer Service (5.9) are the top 4 drivers with higher satisfaction.
- Ease of Use shows low satisfaction (4.1). Usability must be improved.
- Brand Reputation and Price also skew negatively.

Regional Analysis

1. Top Locations by Customer Count:

- Phoenix, AZ = 19 customers
- Chicago, IL / Houston, TX / Los Angeles, CA = 14 customers each

2. Low Volume Locations:

- San Antonio, TX = 6 Customers
- New York, NY / Dallas, TX = 11 customers each

3. High Satisfaction Locations w.r.t Loyalty

- San Antonio, TX = 73% High Satisfaction
- Dallas, TX = 55% High Satisfaction
- Los Angeles, CA = 54% High Satisfaction

These locations show better customer loyalty and satisfaction Outcomes.

4. Low Satisfaction Locations w.r.t Loyalty

- San Diego, CA = 50% Low Satisfaction
- Chicago, IL = 39% Low Satisfaction
- New York, NY / Phoenix, AZ = 38% Low Satisfaction each

These locations might be experiencing product or service issues.

5. Satisfaction by Purchase History:

- Dallas, TX = 100% Satisfaction (Yes) (All customers who purchased again are satisfied)
- Austin, TX / San Diego, CA = 64% Satisfaction (Yes)
- New York, NY = 59% Satisfaction (Yes)

Recommendations

- Invest in feature development, ease of use and support availability to improve loyalty and reduce dissatisfaction.
- Promote Product Quality, Features and Packaging in marketing campaigns to attract more loyal customers.
- Focus on Females aged 36-45 for future engagement.
- Improve Brand Reputation (4.79) by engaging with customers on social media and showcasing customer reviews and testimonials.
- Delivery Speed is rated 5.17 – collaborate with better logistics partners, introduce express delivery and real-time tracking.